Dear Hiring Manager,

I am writing to you in response to your Business Associate Internship posting on Google's website. As a student in the American University in Cairo (AUC) working in various student activities as well as work opportunities on campus related to talent management, I have found myself quite interested in the science of employee productivity and well-being. Since my interests are quite similar to the work of people operations at Google, I have decided to apply in your company to exercise my passion in the worlds' leading work environment.

I have found myself quite intrigued to work in Google and contribute to its growingly positive work environment. I have also been inspired by Google's focus on hiring a diverse group of people who are encouraged to be themselves, and bring out their inner "googlyness".

Through my undergraduate years studying Psychology, I have found myself fascinated by the applications of science to human behavior. I have also strengthened the ability to brainstorm ideas to change people's behaviors as well as actively research them to measure outcome, all of which is an integral aspect of the people operations field.

As the vice president of talent management at AIESEC AUC, the leading local chapter in Egypt and the second biggest NGO in the world, I have learnt to innovate in the processes of talent management and to create recruitment framework as well as research and develop strategies to attract and retain members in the organization. As a Peer Career Advisor at the AUC Career Center, I developed an even stronger passion to deal with and help people, and was able to learn more about the aspects of employability and employee retention through learning about the job market and what increases the satisfaction of our students in their internships and work experience.

Thank you for considering me for the position. I am looking forward to hearing from you.

Respectfully yours,
