International Women's Day 2022
Student Essay Award: Call for Papers

8th March

is the International Women's Day, it is commemorated to remember the history of women and mark their social and political struggles to obtain civil rights, equality and justice. In the Middle East and in Northern Africa, women have a long and rich history of participation in their communities through civil society and grassroots organizations, drawing attention to issues ranging from femicide and sexual harassment, to women's political representation and equal pay.

We welcome essay submissions all undergraduate students. The title of the essay should read as follows: "How Has The 'Me Too' Movement Influenced Your Life And Understanding Of Sexual Harassment In Egypt And Elsewhere"
